

filled by many pirates.

With the characteristic liberality of mechanics, the bricklayers' union of this city, numbering about 30 men, will repair to the African M. E. church on Monday, and lay the brick walls, free of charge. They intend to inclose the building between sunrise and sunset, and Messrs L. C. Blood and J. B. Porter will furnish the workmen a supper at N. E. King's restaurant in the evening. This is an act of real charity and good will for which the donors should receive all praise.
