Twenty members of the bricklayers' union and about 10 tenders attacked the African M. E. church on Monday morning, and laid some 15,000 brick, enclosing the side walls but not quite finishing the gables, owing largely to the bad condition of the brick. The boys did nobly, however, each man working harder than he would for wages, and under the superintendence of Geo. Pratt it was well done. There yet remains about a day's work for four men, which will soon be added. The supper was given by the members of the church, at the restaurant of N. E. King, Messrs. Blood and E. S. Porter donating the dinner.
