

fidellty to duty will make him highly useful and acceptable on the bench.

The obliging colored keeper of the senate cloak-room was surprised and elated the other day on receiving an order for his pay which read, to "Joseph C. Ford, for services as senator." He thinks honors are easy, and is quite sure there is something in a name. The genial secretary of the senate disclaims all responsibility for this fun, however, as he didn't draw the order.
